

Does The Coronavirus Even Exist

Presidential Candidate Chance Trahan Begs The Question That Is On The Minds Of People All Across The World

LOS ANGELES - April 17, 2020 - PRLog -- Does the Coronavirus even exist? That's the question that Nonpartisan Presidential Candidate, Chance Trahan, has been asking recently.

Let's see what Chance has to say, "Does this fairytale virus even exist? I'm serious. Does the Coronavirus even exist? Show me the proof. Show me that this virus really exists. No one I know has it, and everyone else I ask doesn't even know anyone who has it. And those that do are reluctant to provide proof or even introduce me to the people they claim to know that have it."

The Presidential Candidate furthers his point, "I had a chat with someone through LinkedIn named Jennifer Miller that claims to know exactly 20 people that have the Coronavirus, five of them which she claims are her close family members. But, when I started getting more intimate with her about her proving her claims, she started cussing and somewhat started threatening my life with the virus. She then issues a challenge to me to 'go out for five days straight with no mask (and) see if you get sick in three weeks,' which doesn't even make sense. Everybody knows that it doesn't take three weeks to start feeling sick once you contract a virus."

"And it's not just that, it's the fact that many people are going outside without masks on for five days in a row or more and no one is contracting said virus. I told her that I wasn't sick yet and asked her what now. That's when she blocked me. She absolutely refused to introduce me to anyone, and suddenly forgot that she told me 20 people she knows has the virus, and she switched it to only her family members have this said virus, and that she wasn't giving me 'her' instagram to speak with them. What her Instagram has to do with her introducing me to these people that she's claimed is sick, I don't know, but it just seems suspicious that she resorted to that, plus intelligence insulting, just to try to prove her point," says Trahan.

"There's even a video of Fauci touching the incumbent Vice President, then wiping his nose afterwards. Plus, why is everyone in the White House keeping their distance from one another in the Press Briefing Room, and why are some reporters even wearing masks? That makes no sense, because if anyone had the virus, they wouldn't even be allowed in the White house anywhere near the President, and believe me, Secret Service would know if you're a danger to the President," Chance concludes.
